Adesh concentrates his practice on subrogation. He draws on experience counseling and defending companies in a variety of civil matters, including premises liability, breach of contract, commercial matters, negligent security, personal injury, general liability, automobile liability, and homeowner liability matters from the inception of litigation through trial, including preparing research and analysis, conducting depositions, and drafting pleadings, motions, and briefs.

Prior to joining Cozen O'Connor, Adesh was a litigation associate with a national civil litigation firm, where he defended retailers, hotels and resorts, restaurants, and other companies in the retail and hospitality industries in civil matters. Before that, he was a litigation associate with a regional law firm in California and Nevada, where he handled civil disputes involving personal injury, automobile liability, and homeowner liability.

Adesh earned his B.A. from the University of La Verne. While earning his J.D. at Loyola Law School, Adesh worked full-time as a paralegal, fine-tuning his skills in conducting legal research, summarizing medical records and deposition transcripts, responding to discovery requests, and drafting various legal documents.
