

Competition Law not Meant to Fight Inflation

Friday, September 22, 2023

In a BNN Bloomberg video interview Michael Osborne discusses the Canadian government's new legislation that is meant to update the country's competition law in order to stabilize grocery prices. Michael addresses why competition law doesn't address the fundamental problem the legislation is trying to solve, namely, inflation.

Related Practice Areas

- Antitrust & Competition
- Commercial Litigation

□