

Forget Government Mandates. Companies Are Calling the Shots

Thursday, August 12, 2021

Michael Schmidt was quoted in U.S. News discussing businesses enforcing COVID-19 vaccine mandates. For companies, the motives are twofold, says Michael. "A lot of these companies believe as productive as you may be working remotely, they want employees to come back to work," he said. The second motive is risk avoidance, he adds. "They have a general obligation to maintain safe and healthy workplaces," he said.

To read more of this article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Labor & Employment